

PARMELIA GLASS.

FEBRUARY 13, 1895.—Committed to the Committee of the Whole House and ordered to be printed.

---

Mr. TURNER, of Virginia, from the Committee on Pensions, submitted the following

REPORT:

[To accompany H. R. 7091.]

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7091) to pension Parmelia Glass, daughter of a deceased Revolutionary veteran, have considered the same, and respectfully report as follows:

Parmelia Glass is the aged and widowed daughter of Samuel Wharton, deceased, who served for eighteen months as a private in Capt. F. Coleman's company, Col. W. Coleman's regiment, Virginia line, Revolutionary war.

The soldier's service is a matter of record, and he and his widow, who is now dead, were both pensioners.

The papers show that the claimant is entirely dependent for support upon those not legally bound to her maintenance.

There are several precedents for the allowance of pensions, by special act, to the aged and destitute daughters of Revolutionary soldiers, and the bill is therefore returned with a favorable recommendation, amended, however, by striking out all after the word "war" in line 7, and substituting therefor the words "and pay her a pension rated at twelve dollars per month."
